Section 2- Program Requested:

The Dandelion Room Toddler Program (2yr - 3yr)

The NSM Toddler program is a one year preparatory classroom for toddlers aged 2 - 3yrs. Our Montessori Guides will help assist with toilet training, independence, and readiness for the NSM primary classroom.

Students are encouraged to explore practical life activities, develop independent and careful movement throughout the classroom space, and interact with adults and peers daily to deepen cognitive and language skills. During this time, children will develop a sense of confidence, routine, and an understanding of the purpose of the Montessori materials. Activities in the Dandelion Room will focus on fostering independence through creative arts, social/emotional development, control of movement, and self-paced practical life, sensorial, math, language, and cultural activities. Children will be exposed to daily circle time songs, story time, games, and music and movement. This important developmental work fosters readiness for the academic progress made in the primary years.

Toilet Training: Prior to enrollment, parents should have started toilet training with their toddler, and are willing to work with an NSM Toddler Guide to ensure that their child is becoming more independent and familiar with consistent self-care practices at home. It is important that the school and home work together for potty training success.

Primary Program (3yr – 6yr)

The NSM Primary age program is prepared with intention and designed to meet the needs of your child for a three year academic cycle. Readiness for the primary program is determined by Ms. Jessica after careful observation of your child during their day to day activities, and/or attendance in the toddler classroom.

The focus of primary classroom activities revolves around 5 key Areas:

Practical Life: The term Practical Life is used to describe those exercises which involve everyday activities with materials often found in your own household. These exercises form the basis of the child's physical, intellectual, emotional, and social development. Students begin with familiar activities such as spooning, transferring with tongs, wiping, and pouring, and students are free to explore within safe boundaries.

Sensorial: Sensory materials have been developed to facilitate the formation of ordered thought. Children will often taste, touch, and listen to sounds they create by interacting with their environment. The senses can be categorized by visual, tactile, auditory, olfactory, gustatory, thermic, baric, stereognostic, and chromatic. By deepening the cognitive connections of these senses, children develop the capacity for deeper concentration and abstract thought.

Language: A child's natural tendency towards increasingly more complex work will lead them towards picture recognition, word association, commands, phrases, and ultimately sentences. Children come to recognize phonetic symbols as representative ideas and sounds, paving the way to more complex abstractions such as reading comprehension and multiple languages.

Mathematics: Maria Montessori believed that children are naturally attracted to numbers and born with a "mathematical mind", which is built up with exactity based on the order and perceptual awareness found in the development of the senses. These sensorial impressions allow the child to create mental order which leads to reasoning and differentiation.

Culture: Maria Montessori felt that having an understanding of a diverse set of subjects developed a more "cultured" individual. Traditionally this includes the arts and sciences, but at NSM, we also focus on the cultures that are represented in the student population. Materials are refreshed on a monthly basis as topics and areas of study change throughout the year. We explore art concepts, scientific principles, as well as people, food, holidays, and music from around the world.
